STEREOTYPES

People all over the world have a "stereotype", and it bothers me and others so much. My country's stereotype is calling us "cogs" or we like to drink and work in construction. I sometimes laugh it off but many times I make a face and walk away. This is nothing compared to many other places and what they go through. For example if you see a young black male walking down the same street as you, that means cross the street. Also, when you're in a car and someone or a group of people that don't look like you walk by you would lock your doors. Its those types of stereotypes that break my heart. Just because someone from a skin color or race did something bad in the past doesn't mean others that look similar would do the same. There are many different types of stereotypes whether if someone looks a different way or gender... I just wish all of us would not judge one another and just show care and love.
